Old Barn Burns On Wooten Farm

Fire in an old barn on the property of the G. M. Wootens near Vera called out Appomattox firemen Friday about 7:45 p. m. The building, no longer in use, burned to the ground. The volunteers used up their entire water supply in fighting the blaze. Cause of the fire was not determined.

To The Voters
Of
APPOMATTOX COUNTY

I would like to remind you again the importance of the Sheriff's Office and ask you to consider my training and experience as a police officer, when you vote on July 9th.

Public Office is a serious public trust. Its duties and responsibilities must be faithfully performed to protect and further the best interest of the people.

One of the highest ambitions any American citizen can have is to serve the people of his county. The surest foundation for an office is built on one's post record.

It is my ernest desire to serve you to the best of my ability if elected.

Sincerely,

God In His World

Lesson for June 23, 1963

Is God in His world? Certainly, says every Christian. God is everywhere, and so He must be in His world. Go as far as you like in a man-made satellite exploring space: catch the tail of a comet as it sweeps, once in eternity perhaps, into our orbit: take the rocket-fuel of imagination and rush faster than the speed of light, far beyond all visible galaxies,—always God is there. Certainly God is in His world, this world we see and love or hate, this world of stars and suns, angleworms and worms, sea and sky and earth and all the creatures living in it. But the next questions are harder and tied closely together. HOW is God in His world, and what good does it do us to know or believe He is here? We can't see Him, and answers to questions in astronomy or physics or botany, and so forth, would be just the same if there were no God. The distance to the sun from here is just the same for an atheist as for a Christian saint.

How God Is Not Here

To be very short with a very long question, let us face it: God is not in His world the way some thinkers suppose He is. He is not in His world as your soul is in your body. The universe is not the garment of God, or the body of God. God is not in the universe in the way we are, namely, as a part of it. He is neither a part nor the whole of it, and it is neither a part nor the whole of Him. God is also not in the world as a spectator is in a stadium watching a game. He is all there and may-be yelling His head off for the home team; but He can't get out on the field and mix in the plays, and He couldn't even if He wanted to. God is not just here being entertained, and sometimes not knowing what the score is. Moreover, God is not here as a product of this world. You are a product of this world. You are a product of it, you would not be what you are if the universe were utterly different from what it is. But God is not owing His existence to the world or to any one in it. If the universe ceased to be, you would cease to be; but God would be God with or without the universe.

How God Is Here

All the same, God is here in His universe, in two ways. First He is here as Creator. When we use that word, we do not mean merely a deity who created all things a long time ago. He is here today as creator. A pilot in a small plane runs into turbulent weather. His little plane bounces around, and out of the tail of his eye he can see the wings go up and down as they hit the down-drafts and up-drafts. It would scare some people; but the pilot is not afraid. A little instrument on the dash-board shows the plane can stand this much turbulence. It was constructed so as to stand it. The designer of that plane is in it, seeing that the pilot gets through safely. So God is in the laws of the universe. He is in its reliability, in its beauty no less.

The Universe Points To God

Two wrong ideas come up here. One is that we can learn nothing about God from the universe. It is a waste of time (some people maintain) for a Christian to study the universe, in other words to be a scientist, because no amount of scientific knowlecge brings you a step nearer God. The truth is, however, that we can learn much about God through a study of science. "Maker of heaven and earth" takes on tremendous meaning for people who take the trouble to find out what is known about the worlds God made. The opposite and equally mistaken notion is that we learn all we need to learn about God just from observing the world He made. Quite the contrary; some of the most important and urgent questions we can ask are not to be answered by looking into telescopes or microscopes. How can I come to terms with God? Am I no more to God than other animals are? When I have fallen into sin, does God care? What does God want me to do? How can I keep from being lost in this vast universe? These and other questions turn us from the Creator's wonderful works to His wonderful Word. There we may learn how the wonders of His power are more than matched by the wonders of His grace.

Pastor Speaks

Personal Fragrance"

"Personal Fragrance," this phrase was penned by the late Dr. S. D. Gordon, one of the great all - time devotionalists.

The smell of honeysuckle, the sweet scent of lilac, the faint odor of the gardenia, each has a distinct fragrance of its own. Each one lives eff an odor that characterizes the distinctiveness of its nature. We like their smell; for they reveal that summer is near. Life is bursting out all over again.

Have you suddenly became aware that a person was in your presence? The particular fragrance of a certain kind of perfume seem to suggest to you their presence. Some have the ability to blend perfume into their personality make - up with grace and beauty, while others just put on perfume.

The great Apostle, Luke in Acts 1:8, says, "But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit is come upon you, and you shall be witnesses, of me." Every day we give off some kind of testimony. We witness to some influence in our lives. Too often it is not the rich fragrance of a powerful influence of the presence of Christ.

When these early Christians came from ten days with the Lord in the upper room, they brought with them a fragrance which has lived throughout the centuries. For the same Spirit which came in power upon those early Christians, still invades the lives of His people today. A personal power and witness we have will never be taken from us.

Powers have personal distinctive odors, each a personality of its own. So with each individual Christian. Each has a role in the revelation of Christ distinct and unique. Every dewdrop, we are told, that glitters in the morning sun; every snowflake that falls; and every life that God has given has a distinct and different contribution to make in God's world order. If each falls in the development of this different unique trait, then, so far as the human is concerned, that part of God's revelation is unknown.

Paul the great Apostle says, "For we are His Workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for the purpose of good works" Eph. 1:10. Each is a creative act of God in the Love and purpose of Christ, and when we fail to relate to Christ as Saviour our Lord that part of God's revelation is unknown so far as the human life? Let your life develop in Him. He will fulfill in you some destiny. He has placed in you some destiny unique to your own life.

Be found in God's house with your family and worship Him in Spirit and in truth.

The Editor
Times - Virginian
Appomattox, Virginia
Dear Sir:

Through your newspaper I want to publicly thank the local rescue squads for coming to our aid at the recent drowning at Stevens Store in Amherst County. The Life Saving Crews from Altavista, Appomattox, Bedford, Buena Vista, Campbell County and Lynchburg responded quickly to our call for help early Sunday morning, June 9. In a very short time there were ten boats in the water taking part in the dragging operation.

I also thank the State Police, and in particular Trooper W. E. Daniels, for setting up a roadblock at the scene to allow us to work undisturbed.

We appreciate the help that was given to us and hope that we will be able to help these Crews sometime.

Yours truly,
Richard L. Bennett, Captain

Seventh-Day Adventist Church
Second Week at Camp Meeting—Several Seventh-day Adventist from Appomattox will transfer their regular weekly worship services to the site of the annual camp meeting at New Market, Va. for the second time on Saturday, June 22.

Last Sturday those of the local congregation who met for worship during the opening days of the annual 10-day religious convention at the camp site will repeat the procedure again this week.

The report is that our church members are enjoying a heartening spiritual uplift as a results of this great meeting. This type of spiritual sitting together to study the great truths of God's word stimulates a greater religious experience in the individual than almost any other type of activity.

There will be a list of outstanding guest ministers who will be visiting our camp meeting. Among them will be William A. Fagal and the "Faith for Today" quartet who will receive a hearty welcome. Harold Shryack MD, will give health talks daily at 9:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. for both week ends. Ralph Watts, a missionary, formerly president of the South African Division will be there June 20-22. Neal Wilson, President of the Columbia Union Conference will be present June 20-22 to conduct the morning devotional period. There will be a daily Sabbath School Worshop conducted by Eric B. Hare and Louise Meyer of the General Conference, Washington, D. C., June 17-22. Elder Ralph Watts will preach the 11:00 o'clock sermon, Sabbath, June 22 at which time three young ministers will be ordained.

County Votes To Set Up Commission

Appomattox County Supervisors and the mayors and representatives of the town councils of Pamplin and Appomattox met Tuesday evening at Farmers National Bank and voted to set up a joint planning commission for the county. Each governing body will elect one of its members to the commission. Supervisors will also appoint two members, and each town council one for a total of seven members on the commission. The resolution to set up the commission will go into effect sometime in August, supervisor O. W. Martin, Jr., said Tuesday.
